J. N. STEVENS, Chairman.
R. A. C. WILSON, Secretary.

Much interest is attached to the meeting of the Indiana state republican convention to-day. The nomination of a strong state ticket will make the state doubly sure for General Harrison.

Four or five weeks ago that General Harrison should be elected by acclamation seems to have aroused a protest in Alabama, that state having some solidly democratic on Monday. But the citizens of that state have nearly three months in which to see the error of their political ways.

Justice Day did a creditable thing for himself when he refused to serve on the Parnell commission, on account of the course which had been much against him that he was prejudiced. Justice as well as fair play, demanded that the commission should be composed of impartial and unprejudiced judges. The effort to make the commission a prejudiced one has done much to weaken the government's cause.

By reading the letter of acceptance of General Fisk, the prohibition candidate for president, the impression would be gained that the cause of temperance had not been advanced a single step by the republican party. While General Fisk is not in exact harmony with the facts on this point it must be admitted that he is imbued with a spirit of devotion to a party which has only kept the party of the saloon and liquor traffic in power.

Our dispatches this morning state that the sub-committee of the senate finance committee is hard at work on the tariff bill which it expects to have completed in a few days. The energy which the committee has displayed in framing the bill, shows that the republican senators are determined that the party shall not go before the country without some definite position on the tariff question, aside from McKinley's free whisky plank. The bill which will be reported to the republican senate will be far superior to the Mills bill in that it will aim to effect a revision of the tariff from a non sectional standpoint. The Mills bill effects a revision almost solely in the interests of the south, while the bill to be reported to the senate will more nearly conform to the idea of a just and practical revision of the tariff, the interests of all sections of the country being taken into consideration.

Leaving aside all questions as to the correctness of Senator Sherman's position with regard to the fisheries treaty, he is to be commended for the frank and open manner in which he discussed the question of its ratification in the senate yesterday. His statement that the treaty should be considered in a non-partisan manner will find general endorsement. Quite a number of the political demagogues in both parties could cover up pro-British speeches with the English government merely for the purpose of enlisting and retaining the support of the Irish element in our national life. These men have a poor estimate of the intelligence of the Irish American voters, when they seek by such means their support in such a manner. Senator Sherman's remarks concerning the intimate relations which should exist between England and the United States are those in which every patriotic citizen can endorse. The more that questions of such national importance are divested of partisan meaning, the better will the interests of the country be subserved by it.

The New York Tribune regards the Irish question as far from a practical solution as ever. It believes that no real progress can be made until Mr. Gladstone returns to power. In connection with the ominous debate on the Parnell commission bill it said:

The Irish members were entitled to an impartial investigation of the charges made against them. They should have been allowed to debate the motion clause by clause. Their rights as members of the imperial parliament should have been respected and protected. The investigation should not have been directed in a spirit hostile to them and manifestly favorable to their accusers. They should have had fair play. This they have not had. They have had no voice in arranging the details or in framing the scope of the investigation. The jury of three judges has been formed without their consent. They were gagged and silenced by a premature enforcement of closure. The proceedings have vitiated the ordinary claim that Ireland and its representatives are not discriminated against at Westminster.

Then there is another and equally impressive moral to be drawn from these scenes of recrimination and evil passion. The unionist allies have utterly failed to reconcile Ireland and its representatives to the existing system. No progress has been made since the defeat of the home rule measure. For two years, it is true, the proceeding of parliament have been more decorous, obstruction tactics have ceased, there have been few scenes from the Irish benches, and English legislation has proceeded without serious interruption. There were surface indications of an improvement in the relations of the English and the Irish. But no dependence was to be placed on these evidences, since the conditions of the liberal alliance with the Parnellites imposed self-restraint upon the Irish party. At last under the pressure of this debate the Irish nature is stirred to its depths. The Parnellites are again defiant, passionate and resentful. Their leader with a face livid with anger alternately reproaches ministers for their breaches of faith and denounces the English majority for their rancorous hostility to everything that is dear to the hearts of Irishmen. Never in the palmiest days of obstruction has the conflict seemed so utterly irreconcilable as it does this week. Two years of coercion under unionist auspices have only served to embitter the Irish nature and widen the breach between hostile races. No real progress toward reconciliation has been made; none will be possible until Mr. Gladstone returns to power.

THE ROYAL FAMILY OF GREECE.

A Letter from a Friend of the King and Queen.

ATHENS, July 16, 1888.

It is a common saying in Athens that there is no king happier than the king of Greece. I don't know how far this is true, but certainly no king is freer in his movements than King George. Strangers, especially Russians and Germans, who imagine that nihilists and socialists are everywhere, are amazed when they come to the conclusion that the gentleman and lady walking quietly in front of them, arm in arm, dressed like everybody else, must be the king and queen, because all the people bow to them, while the officers salute and soldiers present arms as they pass by. They cannot understand how a king dares to walk amongst his subjects in this free and easy way, without any escort and without taking the slightest precaution for his safety. Yet this is an everyday occurrence in Athens.

One often meets the king walking with the queen or the Princess Alexandra, usually followed by a splendid Danish dog, at another time it is the queen with her two sons or the king with an aide de camp both dressed in civilian's clothes. Sometimes they go on horseback, in which they are followed by two servants in livery, for the queen prefers driving to riding, although she is an excellent horsewoman.

They have so much confidence in the affection of their subjects and are so sure of their own personal safety, that our royal family rather enjoys mixing with the crowd on the occasion of some illumination or other public amusement, when they walk about amongst the people like any ordinary family. On Holy Friday, for instance, I met them moving about in this way amongst the crowds standing in Constitution Place and along Hermes street, waiting to see the processions pass by, one of the most beautiful sights of Athens.

Both the king and the queen, although Protestants, attend religious services at various churches and go regularly to all the church services. The royal palace contains two chapels, one Protestant, for the king, in which the service is read in German, and the other Greek for the queen, served by a Greek priest and a choir composed of Greek men and boys, who sing the Greek hymns according to European music. The princes have also been taught to have great respect for the church.

The greatest care has been taken in the education of the royal children. Crown Prince Constantine, a tall, handsome young man of nineteen, unites great strength of character and will to a very amiable disposition, which gives a charm to his person, and causes him to be adored by the people, who place in him all their hopes for the future greatness of their country, and see in him the future emperor of Constantinople. He has a hard student and learns well what he takes up. His professors were never able to say enough, and he has so much conscientiousness that he would always learn more than the set task, saying that he had so many things to learn in order to become a good king that he had no time to lose. In a sham fight in which he took part the military cadets were ordered to take by storm a hill which was supposed to be occupied by the enemy. The crown prince although much the youngest did his best to arrive the first, remarking that it was a duty for him to lead the way. [illegible] Footman in the first [illegible] the fire, set fire a few months he was sent to the king [illegible] Russia. The king himself superintended the execution of the new cruiser's plans, and gave a great many directions as to how different parts of the edifice were to be executed. He is very proud of the part he played on the work.

I once had the honor of being shown over the palace by the king himself, who was careful to point out all the interesting details of the construction. He told me remark how the planks of the floor were joined together exactly as they are on a ship's deck, and how the doors and windows were carved according to designs made by himself. He also dwelt on the fact that the whole building had been executed entirely by Greek workmen, which shows the great progress that industry and art have made in Greece within the last few years.

Besides the palace, several very pretty houses in Swiss style have been built in different parts of the grounds as habitations for the secretaries, the manager of the estate and other people belonging to the court, which give a more inhabited look to the place. Here the king passes the three or six summer months, leading the life of a country gentleman, going up once a week to Athens to look after affairs of state, but succeeding comfortably the rest of the time in avoiding ceremonies, diplomacy and other weeds of which he often keeps to dinner.

The prince and the Princess Alexandra [illegible] country house because they are there free from all the restraints imposed upon them by court etiquette and can enjoy all kinds of physical exercises. As children they had few toys, the king preferring that they exercise in the open air to playing within doors. I remember once while on a visit to the queen's Russian secretary, who was then living in Tatoi, seeing the three elder princes playing [illegible] and with [illegible] children of the same age. They had constructed the musical instruments out of pieces of wood and branches of the trees, and sang the tunes standing in a ring round a circle of chairs.

Such is an exact, though incomplete, picture of the home life of one of the simplest and yet one of the noblest reigning families of the old world.

ALEXANDRE A. RANGABE.

The Common Debate

LONDON, August 7. In the commons this evening W. H. Smith, the government leader, moved that if the Parnellite inquiry bill was not passed by midnight the rule should be suspended.

The motion was adopted and the house proceeded to the consideration of the bill as amended.

Matthews home secretary moved to insert the following:

If any person having been served with a summons under this act shall fail to appear, the commission shall have the power to issue a warrant for the arrest of such person. Adopted.

Matthews next moved that anybody who is summoned to attend before the commission and who refuses or fails to attend shall be liable to punishment for contempt of the high court justice of England.

Parnell moved an amendment to the effect that any person refusing to make a full and true disclosure touching all matters in respect of which he might be examined should be liable to punishment by the high court of justice which after a discussion was rejected by a vote of 191 to 120.

A long discussion ensued on the proposal by Hunter (liberal) to compel the Times to formulate its charges before the opening of the inquiry by the commission. It was opposed by the government and finally rejected.

Several amendments consisting mainly of minor instructions to the commission were rejected. Other new clauses were then debated and the house adjourned at 2.10 a. m.

COLORADO CITY.

A Runaway Car on the Midland—Items of General Interest.

Dr. Ammerman's new cottage is nearing completion.

The city council has dispensed with the services of the special policemen in Bott's addition, also with one of the police force.

The Midland suburban and through passenger trains are heavily loaded every day, and it is often necessary to provide extra coaches.

The band holds regular rehearsals every Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, at the News office. Their improvement is quite rapid.

About nine o'clock yesterday morning a flat car heavily loaded with stone, got away from the quarry west of town, and finding its way out on to the Midland main track, started east on its own hook. The grade declines considerably from Colorado City to Colorado Springs, and the car assumed a frightful speed. Luckily, no trains were in the way, and the wild car continued on its course unobstructed crossed the High trestle bridge over the Rio Grande track and darted through Moreno avenue in Colorado Springs, until it came to the Y at the Santa Fe track. Although by this time the speed had considerably diminished, enough momentum was retained to have carried the car considerably further if the two tracks had agreed on the course to be followed. The front truck seemed willing to continue eastward out on to the Ft. Worth track, but the rear truck was determined to follow the north spur of the Y to the Santa Fe track. Here the trouble began and ended the career of the runaway car. Besides badly twisting the rails little damage was done, though it took about two hours' time and considerable labor to unload the car and replace it on the track. The 10 o'clock suburban train had to be abandoned in consequence.

Hon Joseph McDonald has sent his acceptance of the position of member of the advisory committee of the national democratic committee.

CITY COUNCIL.

Proceedings of the Adjourned Meeting Held Last Evening.

The adjourned meeting of the city council convened last night with Mayor Stickler and six members of the council present.

On the read of petition and report of Aldermen Skinner of the sewerage committee, reported in favor of empowering the city attorney to negotiate with Messrs Paine and Preston in relation to the right of way for the sewer leading through their property on Pike avenue.

The sewer and ditch committee presented a report in favor of accepting the deed to certain property opposite the city hall and owned by Mr Chas Walker. The said deed is to be an alley extending from Nevada avenue to the cross alley in the same block. The report was adopted.

Alderman Skinner presented the following ordinance which was read:

Resolved, That the committee on sewerage be and is hereby authorized to have constructed sewer lines numbers five and six in addition to those contracted for, providing there is sufficient money left of the money in the sewer fund for the same, said lines to be as described by the city engineer in the foregoing report.

The resolution carried without a dissenting vote.

The bids of John Courter and Calloway and Walsh offering to build the flush tanks for the sewers were both rejected, the council not being ready to move in the matter.

On motion the rules were suspended and an ordinance entitled "An ordinance concerning drain layers" was read, and placed upon its passage.

The ordinance was passed after several amendments had been made.

On motion the rules were suspended and the council proceeded to the consideration of an ordinance entitled "An ordinance concerning the connecting and using of drains or sewers with the public sewers of the city, its patrol, or appurtenances."

The ordinance was passed as read.

The clerk was instructed to procure suitable blanks for granting permits to drain sewers.

The city attorney was instructed to draw up an amendment to the ordinance concerning fire limits, extending the fire limits north to Bijou street.

The city clerk was instructed to purchase six copies of the new city directory, one for the city clerk's office, and the others for the mayor's office.

The council then adjourned.

Republican Convention.

The republicans of El Paso county are called to meet in county convention at the court house hall, Colorado Springs, on Thursday, the 16th day of August, 1888, at 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of electing five (5) delegates to the state convention, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said convention.

THOS. BANNER,
Chairman County Committee.

FLORISSANT NOTES.

The potato crop is progressing rapidly although the usual summer rains have failed to put in their appearance.

Messrs. Law and Phelps are removing their saw mill to the lands of Mr. Allen, three miles southwest of town, this week. They bring it from near Cascade.

The saw mill and planer of C. J. Davis & Co., are now running below town.

The saw mill of R. D. Smith is soon to be removed from Four Mile to the lands of D. J. White, three miles north of Florissant. It is rumored that the mills of both Mr. Cribbs and Mr. Clough are soon to be set up near Florissant.

The pavilion of the Cornet band has been completed since the 4th of July and is a fine structure of its kind; stands in a nice grove eighty rods south of the depot, and parties getting up excursions will do well to remember that "this is a nice place to picnic."

Mr. John Wilson has a neat new hotel in process of construction and well under way.

Judge Alex Blake and wife made the family of Mr. Donnell a short visit last week. Mr Blake is at present probate judge of Osage county, Kansas, and was on a visit to a daughter in the San Juan valley, but had to make his visits short, as a probate judge in Kansas cannot act through a deputy.

Mr Wm J Roberts has the specifications in the hands of the carpenters for bids on the construction of a nice cottage on the south side, to be commenced by the middle of this month.

The summer term of school closed last Friday and Mr. Bales, our teacher, is spending his vacation ranching.

The school for invalids on the north branch is not [illegible] seemed but it is presumed that it will be soon.

There are a number of cases of destitution in the city, to relieve which it is necessary to appeal to the public. The principal need at present is in the way of bedding of any description. Persons who would be willing to donate any articles in this line can leave them, at No. 15 Kiowa street, or by giving their address they will be called for.

MARY JANE'S LETTER.

Congressmen Better Looking from the Gallery Than Near By.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. It is rather remarkable that the congressmen the visitor sees from the gallery and the congressmen he sees face to face are very different people. This is especially noticeable among people who are in the galleries a great deal, like newspaper people, for instance.

In my own experience the faces of certain congressmen are perfectly familiar to me from the distance of the galleries, and I know them as well as my own, with every line, wrinkle, mark and expression impressed upon the sensory motter of my brain; but when I meet those same men passing in the lobbies or upon the street, which is seldom, I have to take a second look to recognize them. Distance softens faces wonderfully, and unless a member's beauty consists of delicate facial lines, sensitive expression or something of that sort, distance certainly lends enchantment to the view. Another peculiar feeling the gallery acquaintance experiences upon meeting at close range one of those distance faces is the sense that she is looking at it through a magnifying glass, and while I am not impressed by the gigantic proportions of congressmen as seen from the gallery, I seldom stand by the side of one without feeling that he is a very large man. I mean, physically, of course. This applies only to those men whom I do not know personally and of whose proportions and whose lineaments I judge only in a purely mechanical way.

There is a senator's wife in Washington, at least during the season, who is full of [illegible] and thoroughly subservient to the demands of fash[illegible]. One of the burdens of her life is the compulsory entertainment of her husband's constituents, good, honest people, with influence and votes which no politician can dare to ignore, and she has more or less of it to do, but she manages well, and it is only on rare occasions that the art of the city and the nature of the rural districts are brought to the touching point. It happened once, however, at a little evening entertainment, and Farmer Grubbins and Mr. De Dood were thrown together, although the lady had been careful not to hurt Mr. D.'s feelings by an introduction to the farmer. Mr. D., however, with better manners than his hostess, didn't ignore Farmer Grubbins, and seeing that the old gentleman was diffident, engaged him in conversation, or rather drew him into that in progress, and the lady began to show signs of nervousness as the old man became interested in the talk. New York city distances were the subject, and the young man was telling how rapidly and easily people got around the great town with the improved means of transportation.

"Why," said he, with an English drawl and mannerism peculiarly pleasing to the lady, "I take the tramway at my apartments, and in the briefest possible time I am put down at my office four miles away."

"Yes," assented the old man, "or you can take a street car and do the same thing."

The young man was nonplused for an instant. The company smiled, but he saw the old man was honest in mistaking the tramway for some stylish mode of transportation, and went on, but the hostess was so shocked at the ignorance [illegible] that she did not recover her equanimity all evening. The best part of it was that all the ladies present considered that the joke was on the hostess and not on her country guest.

One of the unpopular men in Washington is Gen. Greely, of the weather bureau, not because of the weather he provides, but because of the fact that he jumped from a lieutenant's position to a brigadier generalship over men much longer in the service, and because his elevation has given him enlargement of the cranium. In other words, he feels his oats, and takes no pains to conceal the fact from those with whom he comes in contact. A case in point: A young lady, who knew him only as the "Arctic hero," was quite anxious to meet him, and one evening at a reception he was presented.

"Ah, Mr. Greely," she exclaimed in the usual girl fashion, "I am very glad to see you. I have been very anxious to meet you indeed."

"Yes," he replied with a chilling modesty, "I have understood as much."

The girl saw he was in earnest, and she was so immensely pleased with him that she gave away as much as she could gracefully do so, and has remained away ever since.

I heard that story at the Gossip club, and of course it is true.

Washington has more queer turnouts than any city in the United States, and the queerest are those driven by the colored members of society. The funniest one I have yet seen I ran across in Pennsylvania avenue one hot day last week. The wagon was loaded with chicken coops and was pulled by a better horse than the darky usually drives, and he had on a pair of pants—the horse, not the darky. They were on his fore legs, fastened to the collar and falling gracefully to his hoofs. They were second hand from overalls and were probably put on to protect the horse from the flies, but their effect was irresistibly funny, and as the horse walked along the street [illegible] everybody stopped to look and everybody who looked laughed and laughed. But the darky and the horse took no note and went their way.

On the square beyond I met Dr. Mary Walker, and she isn't half so comical in dress as that horse was.

MARY JANE.

T. W. SHERWOOD, Signal Observer.

Wm. W. Taylor, of Flora, Ills., aged 35 years, died in this city yesterday.

The police court records for yesterday show one disturber of the peace who was fined $5 and costs.

All members of the Cleveland and Thurman club are requested to be present at the meeting of the club this evening.

A notice to contractors is published in another column calling for bids for the erection of an addition to the Garfield school.

Flags were floating at half mast on both the city hall, the G. A. R. and the Blackmer & Dry Goods Company in respect to Gen. Philip H. Sheridan.

There are undelivered telegrams at the Western Union telegraph office for Miss Stratton, Jere J. Roche, Mrs. Mercy Hobbs and H. L. Musselman.

The chairman of the prohibition county central committee issues a call for the county convention in this morning's GAZETTE for Thursday August 16th.

Mr. J. H. Bowman, city passenger agent of the Midland, has gone to Denver for a week to supply the place of Agent Patterson who is seriously ill.

Miss Lulu Hoge entertained a small party of friends at her pleasant home on Nevada avenue last night, in honor of her friend, Miss Brown, of Topeka, Kas.

The GAZETTE was in error yesterday morning in announcing that Mr. David McShane had been deputized as a special policeman. It was Mr. Barney McShane.

The "Essex Cafe," a new restaurant, will be opened at No. 110 North Tejon street, by F. P. Davis and A. N. Mariner. They will serve both regular meals and short orders.

Work on the grade of the Rock Island road has been completed at this end of the line, with the exception of the fill cut north of the city, which it is thought will be completed in about four weeks.

Chief Pendu has received a complimentary invitation requesting himself and the members of the fire department to be present at the state tournament, to be held at Aspen, commencing the 14th.

Mr. Chester B. Ferry yesterday morning appeared at the city hall and qualified as chief of the fire department. The new chief expresses his intention of immediately urging the necessity of putting in the electric fire alarm system.

Yesterday morning while digging in the sewer trenches in the southern part of the city the embankment gave way and buried two of the workmen. They were soon released by their fellow workmen more scared than alive.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Collins, of Topeka, who have been stopping at Eastholm, at Cascade, for several weeks, have returned home. Mr. Collins is probably the largest real estate dealer in the state of Kansas, and has become largely interested, financially, in Cascade.

City Marshal Dana has had a handsome oak picture frame made which is divided into sections. The centre is the largest space and in it is a picture of himself surrounded by the eight city policemen. The side compartments are reserved for cabinet sized pictures of the other city officers.

The Midland has issued another very neat pamphlet entitled "Familiar Scenes for Odd Times." It abounds in comic illustrations of Colorado scenery and western incidents. Colorado Springs is represented by a dude being thrown from a chair by a powerful spring after the cushion has burst.

The runaway current on the streets for some days that work had been suspended on the toll road to Pike's Peak from Cascade on account of an injunction brought by the government, is denied at the office of Carlile, Price & McGarock, the contractors who are doing the work. The only trouble they are experiencing is in getting men to work at such a high altitude.

Among the guests at "Eastholm," Mrs. F. M. Hewlett's beautiful house at Cascade are the following: Mrs. C. W. Moore and Miss Crawford, Mt. Pleasant, Texas; John Jackson and wife, Shreveport, La.; Miss Clara Green, Emporia, Kas.; Mrs. J. C. Allen and two children, Mrs. R. A. Balch, Miss M. Gibson, Mrs. H. Tripler, Corsicana, Texas; Geo. West, wife and daughter, Mrs. C. A. Perry, Galveston, Mrs. J. R. Lee, Jesse Lee, St. Louis; F. S. Leonard and wife, Colorado Springs.

Lovers of base ball are assured of some good games during the next thirty days. Dates have been made with Pueblo's new club, Greeley, the Zacatecas and the Five Points and High School nines of Denver. They are all good clubs and will play good ball. Greeley and the High School clubs are strangers here but both have good teams. Greeley was the Five Points strongest competitor for the championship of the state before Colorado Springs entered the field and still have a crack team. They will be here Monday, August 13th, and will make our boys play ball. Bates is the main stay of the High School nine and that alone is a guarantee for a good game of ball. Pueblo will be here on Saturday, August 11th, with their crack battery—Hoar and Thorne—and as each club has won two games an exciting contest may be looked for.

The attraction at the opera house will be the "Two Johns Comedy Co." which appears here a week from to-night. The Worcester, Mass. Telegram speaks of the company as follows: "The Two Johns are very funny—folks—and kept the audience at the theatre last evening in almost continual laughter. J. C. Stewart as Phillip Johns and Paul Dresser as Peter Johns are supposed to be coming so nearly resembling each other that their identity completely mystified everybody with whom they come in contact, and even their wives become mixed up and cannot tell their own husbands. The plot is simply a framework for the introduction of the Two Johns at [illegible] ridiculous situations and the fun is continuous. Mr. Stewart is a clever comedian and is ably supported by Mr. Dresser. The company is an average one for a traveling organization and the performance as a whole gave very good satisfaction.

THE G. A. R. EXCURSION TO CHICAGO.

All members of the Grand Army of the Republic will remember with pleasure the delightful trip to St. Louis last year on the WABASH, and many will be pleased that the WABASH (the short line) will be the favorite route for the Western Comrades which attend at St. Louis on this occasion.

As the WABASH is the SHORT LINE to St. Louis—it is the All Rail Line to Columbus—G. A. R. men should bear this in mind and write to the undersigned for rates, time cards and Pullman accommodations. C. M. HAMPSON,

BEST LINE EAST.

The Union Pacific Ry is by all odds the "Best Line East," on account of the fast time that is made and the reasonable hours for leaving Denver. Also the great convenience there is in buying tickets over this line from Kansas City, Council Bluffs, St. Louis and Chicago, as it is one of the principal cities in the east. The U. P. Ry. is also the short line to the Pacific Coast, running two trains daily west and four trains to the east daily. The evening trains from Colorado Springs make close connection to Denver with the Union Pacific Ry. 6-22-tf
